

Donalda K. Ammons, Ed.D.

Dr. Donalda Ammons, born and raised in Washington D.C., attended and graduated with honors with three advanced degrees- a Bachelor's degree in Social Philosophy, a Master's degree in deaf education and a doctoral degree in higher education with concentration in foreign language education.

Dr. Ammons was recently awarded the title of Professor Emerita after serving for 31 years as a full-time tenured professor of Spanish at Gallaudet University, the world's only liberal arts university for the deaf in Washington, D.C.

In addition, Dr. Ammons has served on national and international level organizations in various capacities. She continues to contribute as an author of numerous articles on Deaf culture and sports, published in various professional journals and books. Dr. Ammons has traveled extensively to present papers and conduct workshops relating to human rights for deaf people, deaf sports, and political and educational leadership in more than 50 countries.